Appropriated for 1837 - - - - -	$1,845,940 75
Estimated for 1838 - - - - -	1,717,714 91
	128,225 84
This sum, less estimated for 1838 than was appropriated for 1837 - - - - -

NOTE.—This diminution arises from a difference in the number and classes of vessels proposed to be employed in 1837 and 1833.

I. CHAUNCEY,

NAVY COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE, Nov. 24, 1837.

D 2.

ESTIMATE of the number and pay of officers, &c., required for five receiving vessels, for the year 1838, being part of the first item in the general estimate.

	42	42	22	15	42	163	63,683 50
Appropriated for 1837							193,787 50
Less estimated for 1838 than was appropriated for 1837							130,104 00

NOTE. — This reduction of $130,104 arises from a reduction in the number of officers and others for the receiving vessels at Boston, New York, and Norfolk. The estimates for 1837 contemplated that ships of the line prepared for service, excepting provisions and perishable stores, should be used for this purpose at these stations, with a complement of officers and a partial complement of petty officers and seamen, for the double purpose of giving the recruits better preparatory training for sea service, and to have a respectable force ready for any unexpected demand. It having been determined that this plan should be relinquished in part, the estimates have been prepared accordingly.

Increase for 1838	-	-	-	300 00

This increase of $300 arises from the difference of pay allowed to the "master builder" at the navy yard, Philadelphia, and that of "naval constructor," which it is contemplated will be required, for the year 1838.

On leave - - - -	$224,450	-	$224,450 00
On furlough - - - -	-	$7,280	7,280 00
Sixty-four midshipmen, that, after examination, may be entitled to be arranged as passed midshipmen, in addition to their pay as midshipmen - - - -	-	-	19,200 00
Estimated for 1838 - - - -	-	-	$250,930 00
Appropriated for 1837 - - - -	-	-	115,631 25
Increase for 1838 - - - -	-	-	$135,298 75

The increase of the amount under this item, beyond the estimates for 1837, is owing to two causes: the number in some classes of officers in the service has been increased, and the number estimated for vessels in commission for 1838, varies from the numbers estimated for such employment in 1837.

I. CHAUNCEY.

NAVY COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE, November 24, 1837.

D 6.

ESTIMATE of the amount required for provisions for the year 1838, explanatory of the third item in the general estimate.

7,518 persons in vessels in commission, exclusive of marines;
655 marines embarked in vessels in commission;

389 enlisted persons, attached to receiving vessels
and shore stations ;

Making 8,562 persons--at one ration a day, will make 3,125,130 rations, at twenty-five cents each ration, is equal to - - - - -	$781,282 50.
Estimating the balance that may remain in the Treasury on the 1st January, 1838, as available, there may be deducted from this amount the sum of $181,282 50, which, it is presumed, will not be required, say - - - - -	181,282 50
Which will leave - - - - -	$600,000 00

Being the amount asked for in third item of the general estimate.

				$106,600

NOTE.—In the estimate for hospitals, the board have been induced, by the representations of the commanders, and their own opinions of the probable future wants of the service, to provide for the completion of the plan as originally proposed by Commodore Ridgely, for Brooklyn, New York, and for an additional building near the navy yard, Pensacola.

The completion of the sea-wall for the hospital near Norfolk is represented as necessary for the preservation of the hospital grounds from encroachments of the water on the northern side.

The other objects for these places, and for the hospitals near Charlestown and Philadelphia, are represented to be necessary for the preservation or convenient use of the buildings.

NAVY COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE.

November 24, 1837.

The only item of these estimates which requires remarks from the Board of Navy Commissioners, is that which proposes $50,000 for the purchase of ground and building barracks at Brooklyn, N. Y. The board have heretofore expressed, and still entertain the opinion, that a decision upon the future distribution of the marine corps at the naval stations seems to be necessary, before a proper judgment can be formed of the extent of ground, or size of barracks, which may be required at any particular station.

K.

Statement of the measures which have been taken to carry into effect the laws for the gradual increase of the navy, which were approved on the 29th of April, 1816, and 3d March, 1831.

The ships of the line, Columbus, North Carolina, and Delaware have been in service for several years.

The ship of the line Ohio, was launched in 1820, and only completed in part. Measures have been taken to repair the injuries resulting from decay, and to complete her equipments from the ordinary appropriations, and they will probably be finished soon.

The Pennsylvania ship of the line has been launched; the amount remaining under the appropriation for gradual increase, together with the $100,000 appropriated for placing her in a place of safety, are being expended to prepare her for removal to Norfolk.

The frigates Brandywine, Potomac, and Columbia, have been launched and completed for service. Four ships of the line and six frigates remain on the stocks; they are generally sound, and in a good state of preservation, with the exception of some of their keels, keelsons, and deadwoods, which will require to be replaced before they are launched. They are generally so far advanced that they could probably be completed by the time that crews could be collected for them.

It may be proper to remark, that the remainder of this fund will be expended upon the Pennsylvania ship of the line, but that it will be insufficient to complete the equipment of that ship. Consequently, additional funds will be necessary, should it be determined to complete any of the other vessels.

The distribution of the vessels building is shown in statement I.

Statement of the measures which have been taken to carry into effect the laws for the gradual improvement of the navy, which were approved 3d March, 1827, and 2d March, 1833.

Complete live oak frames have been collected for four ships of the line, seven frigates, and five sloops of war.

Contracts have been made for other live oak frames, which have not yet been delivered, as follows:

For eleven ships of the line, eleven frigates, seventeen sloops of war, nine smaller vessels, and nine steamers; making, in the whole, frames for fifteen ships of the line, eighteen frigates, twenty-two sloops of war, nine smaller vessels, and nine steamers.

Of the incomplete contracts, some are nearly completed; under others a small proportion only has been delivered, and others have been made very recently. By the terms of the contracts, the whole are to be completed on or before the last of March, 1841. No additional contracts have been made for other materials, under this appropriation, since the last report.

The following statement shows more in detail the expenditures which have been made for different purposes from this appropriation, so far as they are shown by returns made to this office, up to the 1st October, 1837:

M.

Report of the measures which have been adopted in relation to the two sloops of war and six small vessels, which were authorized by the act of appropriation for the navy, approved 3d March, 1837.

The two sloops of war have been commenced with frames already procured under other appropriations, one building at Boston, to be called the Cyane, and one at New York, to be called the Levant, and will both soon be ready to launch. Their equipments are also in a state of forwardness. Both can probably be made ready for service by the middle of January next.

There being no suitable frames on hand for the six smaller vessels, advertisements were issued, and contracts have been made for them. Other arrangements will be made in time to commence them so soon as the frames can be procured.

NAVY COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE,
September 28, 1837.

SIR: The board appointed by you for making experiments to ascertain the safety and comparative efficiency of certain naval ordnance, under a resolution of the House of Representatives, were not able to commence those experiments, in compliance with your order of the 12th July, 1836, until the month of December of that year.

The board had previously determined that the experiments should be made to ascertain the safety of the medium 32-pounder gun, of about 50 cwt., and the light 24-pounder gun of about 32 cwt.; and the relative efficiency of the medium 32 pounder gun, of about 50 cwt., and heavy 24-pounder gun of 49 cwt.; and of the light 24-pounder gun, the 42 pounder carronade, and the ship 12-pounder gun.

A necessity for attending to other duties by some of the members, and of making further preparations, rendered it necessary to suspend the experiments near the close of December, 1836, until June, 1837. They were then renewed, and continued until the experiments necessary for the objects proposed by the board were completed.

The board have now the honor to state the general results of the experiments which were made, and their opinions upon the points required by the resolution of the House of Representatives.

For the purpose of testing the safety of the guns in question, the light 24-pounder gun, of 32 cwt. 0 qrs., 16 pounds, was fired with the following charges, viz:

- 1 with 6 pounds powder and 2 shot.
 - 163 times with 5 pounds powder and 2 shot.
 - 5 times with $4\frac{1}{2}$ pounds powder and 2 shot.
 - 7 times with 4 pounds powder and 2 shot; making
 - 176 times double shotted, and
 - 79 times with 6 pounds powder and 1 shot.
 - 717 times with 5 pounds powder and 1 shot.
 - 14 times with $4\frac{1}{2}$ pounds powder and 1 shot.
 - 13 times with 4 pounds powder and 1 shot.
 - 1 time with $3\frac{1}{2}$ pounds powder and 1 shot; making the whole 1,000 times: after which it was loaded with $5\frac{1}{2}$ pounds powder and 2 shot, and the charge of powder increased at each fire, until the 12th, when the gun burst, being loaded with 11 pounds of powder and 2 shot. The medium 32-pounder gun was fired, with the following charges, viz:
 - 2 times with 8 pounds of powder and 2 shot.
 - 70 times with 7 pounds of powder and 2 shot; making
 - 72 times with double shot, and
 - 52 times with 10 pounds powder and 1 shot.
 - 4 times with $9\frac{1}{2}$ pounds powder and 1 shot.
 - 856 times with 8 pounds powder and 1 shot.
 - 12 times with $7\frac{1}{2}$ pounds powder and 1 shot.
 - 2 times with $6\frac{1}{2}$ pounds powder and 1 shot.
 - 2 times with 4 pounds powder and 1 shot, making in all 1,000 times.
- After which it was loaded with $8\frac{1}{2}$ pounds of powder and 2 shot, and the charge of powder increased half a pound at each discharge, until the 24th fire, when the gun burst with a charge of 24 pounds of powder and 2 shot.

The guns were taken from the navy yard at Gosport, without selection, and were frequently fired in rapid succession. The powder used gave an average range of 232 yards, from the epreuve, was very clean, coarse, and apparently of good quality.

The windage of the shot for the 32-pounder medium gun, was from 22 to 36 hundredths of an inch, for the light 24-pounder, from 16 to 28 hundredths of an inch.

These experiments satisfied the board that the light 24-pounder and the medium 32-pounder were perfectly safe, when used with proper charges.

These charges, in the opinion of the board, are :

10 pounds of powder for very distant firing, from the 32-pounder; 8 pounds of powder for the ordinary charge, with one shot; and 6 pounds, for 2 shot, or very close action. For the 24-pounder gun, 6 pounds of powder is considered the proper charge, for very distant firing, 5 pounds for the ordinary charge, and 4½ pounds for 2 shot, or very close action.

As respects the relative efficiency of these guns, as compared with those for which they have been substituted, the board made experiments to ascertain the ranges from the respective guns at their first grazes, with different charges and degrees of elevation; and noted the penetration and effects of the shot upon targets made of the thickness of the side of a frigate of the first class, and placed at the distances of quarter, half, and three-quarters of a mile from the battery.

Two 12-pounder carronades were used, one having a bore of 6.878 inches, and the other with 7.018 inches, or the same as the long 42 pounder gun; 5½ pounds of powder was considered the proper maximum charge for these guns, and 3½ pounds for the ordinary charges. The following table shows the respective ranges at different elevations, to the first grazes:

	Carronade, small bore or 6.878 inches.	Carronade large bore, or 7.018 inches.	Light twenty-four pounder gun, 5.2
At 1°	5½ lbs. powder 498	5½ lbs. powder 422	6 lbs. powder 564
At 1°30'	5½ lbs. powder 660	5½ lbs. powder 555	6 lbs. powder 826
At 1°30'	3½ lbs. powder 573	3½ lbs. powder 462	5 lbs. powder 688
At 3°	3½ lbs. powder 1,080		5 lbs. powder 1,254
At 3°40'	3½ lbs. powder 1,210		5 lbs. powder 1,352
At 3°40'	5½ lbs. powder 1,389		5 lbs. powder 1,352

The proper elevation for the carronade with small bore, when charged with 5½ pounds of powder, and one shot, was found to be 2° 15' to strike the half mile target, and 3° 30' for the three-quarters of mile target; and for the 24-pounder gun, with 6 pounds of powder, 1° 25' for half mile target, and 2° 30' for three-quarters of a mile target. With 3½ pounds of powder the carronade required an elevation of 2° 45', to strike the half mile target, 4° 30' to strike the three-quarter of mile target; and the 24-pounder gun with 5 pounds powder required 1° 45' for the half mile target, and 3° for the three-quarters of mile target.

From these data, it is evident that, with the same elevation, the ranges to the first grazes are greater from the light 24-pounder, than from the 12-pounder of small bore, when loaded with the corresponding charges. The difference of ranges from the two carronades, with the same charges and elevations, shows the very great effect of difference of windage. The relative penetrations into the different targets appeared to be nearly equal, and

The destructive effects of those shot which passed through were greater generally from the 42-pounder carronade, than from the 24-pounder light gun. The 24-pounder gun may be fired with two shot and $4\frac{1}{2}$ pounds of powder, with safety, and with efficiency, if required, at distances not exceeding 350 yards.

There appeared to be no doubt of the superior efficiency of the 24-pounder gun, over the 12-pounder gun as a battery for a sloop of war.

In comparing the relative efficiency of the medium 32-pounder gun with the heavy 24-pounder gun, the difference of windage of the shot for the two guns prevented any accurate comparison of their relative ranges. The average windage, when the ranges were compared, were for the 32-pounder gun, $\frac{2}{100}$ of an inch, and for the 24 pounder gun $\frac{1}{100}$ of an inch. With these differences of windage, the relative ranges of the first grazes were as follows :

The twenty four pounder.		The thirty-two pounder.
At 1°	8 lbs. powder 979 yards.	1°	10 lbs. powder 742 yards.
At 2°30'	6 lbs. powder 1,320 yards.	2°30'	7 $\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. powder 1,210 yards.

After making due allowance for the difference of windage, there can be no doubt that the range of the 24-pounder gun to the first graze with 8 pounds powder will be greater than the range of the 32-pounder with 10 pounds powder, and the 24-pounder, with 6 pounds, will also give a greater range to the first graze, than the 32 pounder with 8 pounds of powder.

Taking all circumstances into consideration, the board all concur in the opinion that the medium 32-pounders are to be preferred to the 24 pounder heavy guns, for the upper gun decks of ship, of the line. Three of the board would prefer the heavy 24-pounders, and two would prefer the medium 32-pounders, for the gun decks of such frigates as are capable of carrying them with convenience.

Notwithstanding this difference of opinion as respects the relative efficiency of these classes of 32-pounder and 24-pounder guns, as compared with others, the board unite in the opinion that they are efficient guns for naval use, and may be used with perfect confidence in their safety, when loaded with the charges which have been proposed in this report.

WASHINGTON, September 28, 1837.

SIR: The multifarious duties devolving on me as commander of the South Sea surveying and exploring expedition requiring my constant attention and early departure from Washington for Norfolk, will not admit of my meeting the board of officers for testing certain guns of the navy, for some days, or perhaps not at all again. I have therefore hastily thrown together the results of my conclusions, derived from observations made during the progress of our late experiments at Old Point, which I request may be received and recorded as a part of our proceedings, and as a manifestation of my individual views of the several topics to which the accompanying paper relates.

I have the honor to be, &c.

Your obedient servant,

THOS. AP CATESBY JONES.

Captain U. S. Navy.

To Commodore CHARLES MORRIS, &c.

Extract from the report of Commodore Thomas ap Catesby Jones, one of the Board of Commissioners for testing certain naval ordnance, to Commodore Charles Morris, senior officer of the board, dated 28th September, 1837.

The conclusions at which I arrive, after maturely considering the results of the various experiments recently conducted at Old Point, for the purpose of testing the safety and comparing the relative efficiency of certain naval ordnance, are :

1. That the light or new sloop's 24-pounder of about cwt., may be used with safety on board ship, with a maximum charge of navy-proof powder, not to exceed one-fourth of the weight of ball ; that these guns, when repeatedly fired in quick succession, with charges varying from 4 to 6 lbs., and sometimes double-shotted, did not recoil with more than ordinary violence ; consequently, they do not endanger their bolts, breechings, &c. more than other guns fired in like manner, with charges proportionable to their respective weight of metal ; and that these observations are alike applicable to the light or medium 32-pounder gun, of about 50 cwt.

2. That the 42-pounder carronade, all things considered, is a more efficient and appropriate armament for our sloops of war or any single decked ship, than the light 24-pounder, as described above.

3. That the long or heavy 24-pounder, of about 49 cwt., is a more efficient gun for the main battery of a frigate than the medium or light 32-pounder of about the same weight, though for the main decks of line of battle ships the latter may answer very well.

I am also of opinion that neither the light 24-pounder nor the light chambered 32-pounder, (although the latter is a very effective gun, so far as regards range and effect,) nor any other carriage gun whatever, is an appropriate gun for the entire armament of a single deck sloop, or at all comparable with the 42-pounder carronade.—(Letter O of the gradual increase naval ordnance.)—The range of the latter being ample for all sea fighting, and the decidedly superior effects of the heavier over the lighter balls, as evinced in the late experiment at Old Point, whether against wood or solid masonry, frees my mind entirely of all question or doubt as to the comparative efficiency of the abovementioned guns, viz: 12-pounder carronade; 24-pounder light new sloop, pattern; or the newly cast chambered 32 of about 40 cwt.

In addition to the superior efficacy of the 12-pounder carronades over the light 24 or 32-pounders, the vast difference of the weight on the ship's upper works, the difference of space occupied on the decks, and the difference of cost, all being decidedly in favor of the carronade, confirmed me in the opinion that the carronade, under existing circumstances, ought to be adhered to as the fixed armament for our corvette or single-deck sloops of war.
